GARAGE MAKEOVER COMPANY HELPS CLIENTS RESET FOR SPRING
Garage Living Encourages Americans to Rethink their Space
during Garage Improvement Month

With days getting longer and temperatures rising, many homeowners are starting their annual Spring-cleaning routines. While this typically involves clearing out closets or rearranging kitchen pantries, the garage is often an afterthought on many to-do lists. As we move towards Garage Improvement Month this May, Garage Living, the premium garage transformation company in the US and Canada, is shining a spotlight on the most underutilized space in many homes.

A recent poll by Garage Living found that 20% of homeowners can't park in their garage because of how cluttered and disorganized it is. It makes sense then, that the first step in any Garage Living transformation is to determine bespoke storage solutions for each client.

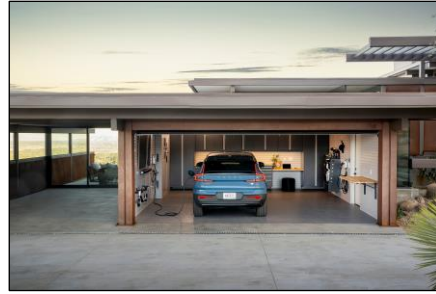

"Reducing clutter is often our clients' number one ask," says Aaron Cash, President and Co-Founder of Garage Living. As the industry leader in custom garage transformations, Garage Living's cabinetry and slatwall systems not only streamline each space but also provide homeowners with a multi-purpose room.

From creating an organized place for cars, bikes, and trucks, to re-imagining the garage into a home gym, Garage Living helps clients remodel their garages based on their needs. Following the initial consultation, on-site visit, and product selection, the transformation itself typically takes only two to four days to install.

A Wall Street Journal survey done in 2016 found that only 11% of homeowners are satisfied with their garage and wouldn't want to improve it. Over the years, Garage Living has noted a marked increase in clients looking to update their garages. In 2019, Garage Living completed 3,800 garage makeovers. In 2020, that number jumped to 5,200 and in 2021, the company completed 7,500 projects. In 2022, the company is on track to complete 8,000.

This ReCharge garage emphasizes sustainability and versatility for electric vehicle owners, including two Volvo-branded Level 2 electric-vehicle chargers. The design features fully customized cabinetry and storage solutions including space for golf clubs and an electric scooter. A Slate Floortex™ floor coating finish protects the concrete surface and complements the architecture. There is a flexible work-from-home space including a built-in desk and a folding leg wall table, as well as an entertainment center with a state-of-the-art smart TV and Bowers & Wilkins speakers.

For this makeover, Garage Living built out custom cabinetry, providing the homeowners with ample space to store tools and sports equipment. Above the cabinetry is a spot to keep spare tires when not in use. Slatwalls on either side of the cabinets allow for hanging storage to be added in the future.

Prior to the makeover, this space was cluttered due to a lack of practical storage systems. Inspired by Garage Living's Performance Designer Series, they built out North American-made, custom steel cabinets, inspired by the color of the homeowner's vehicle, and grounded the room with a carbonite Floortex floor coating to finish off the space.

Garage Living installed slatwall systems to store bikes, ladders and more within this space, in addition to two car lifts that allow the homeowners to double the number of vehicles they can park in their garage.
